BRIEF ABSTRACT OF LETTER.

States that in the matter of recovery of fine of Rs 3000 due from L. Venkata Rao convicted in Bangalore Sessions case No 13 of 22-23, the City Magistrate has suggested the institution of a civil suit so that the immovable property of the debtor may be proceeded against & requests that the Govt. of fine ~~and~~ by distress and sale of the moveable property of the offender and there is no provision under the Myore Code for proceeding against immoveable property. Such a provision has recently been made in British India.

(v) As no special form of remedy has been provided for proceeding against immoveable property, the normal remedy of obtaining a decree by means of a suit and bringing the property to sale may perhaps be resorted to. But having regard to the length and worry of a suit and of the enforcement essential to a decree, it is for consideration whether the offender may not be asked to sell the property by private negotiation & pay off the debt.

NOTE—Contn. sheet.

Serial No.

The accused has no moveable properties from distraining which the fine can be levied. But he has a house. But this cannot be dealt with as the 386 Cr. Procedure does not allow it. The question then is whether the Govt can file a suit & obtain a decree and then realise the decree amount by the sale of the house. The case reported in 2 L.R. 20 Cal 478 at page 481, seems to favour the view that the remedy by suit is not debarred in order to levy the fine, though that was a case in which the fine was sought to be levied after the death of the accused.

L.L.Leg 17/9

As the accused has written to the effect that he has no objection for the Govt to sell his house in satisfaction of the amount due to Govt by the realisation from the sale of say his private debts out of the balance if any. That course may be followed. Public Prosecutor may be instructed to see the Collector & arrange for the sale. If private negotiations fail, a suit must be instituted.

18/9

The house must have prior encumbrances. Encumbrances if any 18.9 be made upon the fine. No objection for suit.

(17) I regret that this file was mixed up in another file in consequence I was unable to attend it. The question raised is an important one & may be stated as follows:-

(a) Whether a fine imposed on a convicted felon be recovered by attachment of immoveable property if not so recovered, how it should be recovered.

It is clear that under the Criminal Procedure Code now in force in Burma, the amount of fines can only be recovered from moveables & not from immoveables.

(b) In Br India an amendment has been made in 1923 & now this amount is recovered from immoveable property in Br India.

NOTE—Contn. Sheet

Serial No.

Next it is necessary to consider the steps necessary to be taken to recover this amount. It is clear from the wording of Section 70 I.P.C. that the fine imposed under the provisions of Indian Penal Code is treated as a debt & is allowed to be levied at any time within six years after the passing of the sentence, & that the death of the offender does not discharge from the liability any property which would, after his death, be legally liable for his debts.

Cr. P. Code deals with corrective law & provides for the manner of levying the fine. If the fine can be recovered out of moveables belonging to the convict, the Govt can do so by summary methods without recourse to Civil Court. If the fine cannot be realized out of any moveables, the obvious course to be followed is to file a suit & obtain a decree on the ground that the imposition of the fine operates as a first judgment debt, in other words, the order of the Magistrate creates the debt which in law represents the compensation for the injury done by the offender & is made payable to Govt which represents the public.

In England, the amount awarded as compensation for any loss of property through or by means of a felony, is considered shall be deemed to be a judgment-debt & shall be recovered as a Civil debt in the manner provided by the summary jurisdiction Acts

	In the present case, I am of opinion that a suit for the recovery of the fine of Rs 30000/- should be filed. With regard to the expediency of such a course, it is necessary to ascertain whether the Bank has some interest which has already been sold for debt due to Mysore Bank. If not sold, a suit may at once be filed & attachment before judgment may be obtained. If approved, the Public Prosecutor will be instructed to file a suit & obtain necessary orders.

it appears from the Deputy ~~Commissioners~~ Magistrate's letter that the Bank has already taken execution proceedings and that the sale of the property was to come off in January. Under the circumstances, filing a suit and obtaining a decree may not be

Serial No.

of much use, since by the time a decree is obtained, there may be nothing left to execute or track for ratable distribution) There is, however, another way of getting at the sale-proceeds, if this not already too late. From the letter of the District-Magistrate (He says the property is attached and is proposed to be sold in execution) — it looks as if the property was not mortgaged to the Bank. If so, there is authority for issuing a warrant under Sec 386 Cr. Pro: Code for levy of the fine, and have precedence over the Bank, so long as the property is sold and the proceeds are still in the hands of the Court and not paid to the Bank. The moment the money is realised by Court, it becomes movable property, and till it is paid to the Bank, it still belongs to the party from whom the fine is to be levied. A fine is a Crown debt having precedence over other debts. It has been so held in 40 ~~Cal~~ Mad 767; 45 Cal 65; ~~xx Bom 457~~; 39 Mad 376 &c. The sale proceeds are attachable under the Cr. Pro. Code, and the Crown has priority over others under Sec 73 of the Civ. Pro. Code.

(vi) I would propose therefore that enquiries may be made at once as to whether the property is sold, and whether the Bank is already paid. If the money is not paid yet to the Bank, or if the sale is yet to come off, a warrant for the levy of the fine may be obtained & kept ready so as soon as the sale is over or if the money is still in Court, to serve the warrant on the Court & take the money. If the property was mortgaged to the Bank, and that is what is known as the English or simple form of mortgage, where the property passes to the mortgagee, the case would be different. Enquiries may be made & action taken as suggested, if there is still time.

(vii) There are two ways of recovering the fine & one is to file a suit & obtain a decree & ask recover the debt out of immoveable property & the other is to wait until the amount is realised by execution of the decree obtained by the Bank.

In the latter case the warrant may be executed by attachment of the money when deposited into Court. This course is simple if the Bank has not taken mortgage of the property.

This file relates to the recovery of the fine imposed on G Venkata Rao, when he was convicted. The Distt magistrate when attempting to recover the fine, found that the accused had only a house, and requested Govt to instruct the Govt Advocate to file a suit and proceed against the house.

Attempts to get at the house without filing a suit have not been successful and the house itself is now the property of the Bank. The accused has no other property - immovable or movable - left, and there is nothing to proceed against. As no further action can be suggested, the file was sent for perusal. If within Six years of the sentence passed, ~~(illegible)~~ the accused acquires any property — &c, after his release — the fine can still be recovered. That is a contingency that may be kept in view. As the file started on a reference of the Distt Magistrate, he may perhaps be informed accordingly.

Sec. 70 under the Penal Code, the fine may be levied at any time within 6 years after the passing of the sentence, and if, under the sentence, the offender is liable to imprisonment for more than 6 years, then at any time previous to the expiration of that period, and the death of the offender does not discharge from the liability any property which would after his death be legally liable for his debts. The Criminal Procedure Code provides in Sec. 386 that the Court passing the sentence may in its discretion issue a warrant for the levy of the amount by distress & sale of any movable property belonging to the offender, although the sentence directs that, in default of payment of the fine, the offender shall be imprisoned.

The question for consideration is whether under the provisions of the

From the penal code it is clear that on the death of the convicted person. The fine may be recovered ~~by proceeding~~ and of any property which would be legally liable for his debts to that in the hands of the heirs of the deceased moveable & immoveable property could be proceeded against. So far as powers against moveable property is concerned the legislature has enacted in Sec 388 Cr: P: Code that it may be distrained & sold. While the substantive provisions of the penal code authorise the levy of fine from and of immoveable property. no specific procedure has been prescribed for proceeding against these. In the absence of any such procedure the High Courts have held that the normal remedy of a Civil suit is the only one. The conclusion from the above

It can not perhaps be argued that because no mention has been made of proceeds against immoveable property, such property can not be in any circumstance be proceeded against, for then it would follow that the person committing the crime & liable for the fine would be in a better position than his heirs in that immoveable property in his hands would be safe but liable in his heirs' hands. We feel strongly that a fine will lie & is the only means of proceeding against immovable property. If the law is amended on the lines in British India, cases like the one in question will not arise

Office of the District Magistrate,

Dated Bangalore, 6th September 1924.

From

The District Magistrate,
Bangalore District.

To Secretary to the Government of
His Highness the Maharaja of Mysore,
Local & Legislative Departments,
BANGALORE.

Sir,

In forwarding herewith the records ending with Bangalore City District's No.175 dated the 1st September 1924, I have the honor to state that the accused G. Venkata Rao was convicted under Sections 467, 471, 468 and 477 (a) Indian Penal Code on 10th August 1923 in Bangalore Sessions Case No.13 of 22-23 on the file of the Assistant Sessions Judge, Bangalore, and was sentenced to undergo three years Rigorous Imprisonment and to pay a fine of Rs.3,000/- in default to undergo an additional period of R.I. for six months. In order to realise the fine amount, the warrant for levy of the fine issued by the Assistant Sessions Judge was forwarded to the District Superintendent of Police, Bangalore, for execution and it is reported by him that the warrantee owns a house in Seshadripuram, Bangalore City, worth about Rs.3,000/- and that he owns no moveable properties. The warrantee was written from the Central Jail urging for the sale of the house by Government and adjustment of the sale proceeds towards the fine and for payment of the balance if any towards his private debt of Rs.3,000/-. The City Magistrate suggests in his report referred to above, that in order to proceed against the immovable property it is necessary to institute a Civil Suit.

I therefore request that you will kindly obtain the sanction of Government instructing the Government Advocate to take necessary action in the matter.

I have the honor to be,
